Famous Female Explorers

Non-chronological report

Have you ever wanted to discover something new? These great women had bigger dreams than anyone else, the greatest dreams of finding new ways to travel, discovering the newest animals and exploring places that no one had been to before. They were fearless pioneers because everybody told them that women should not have joyful ideas. It's a good job they didn't listen! If you have big dreams, follow your heart and don't give up.

Bessie Coleman (1892-1929)
Bessie travelled to France to learn to fly. Bessie Coleman was the first Black, female pilot in the world. She was banned from flying schools as a child because of the colour of her skin, but that didn't stop her. She saved her own money by working very hard. Next, she learnt French so she could read there to take flying lessons. Her nickname was 'Queen Bee' and she performed daredevil stunts in air shows. She died during a practice flight, but will be remembered forever because of her determination.

Gertrude Bell (1868-1926)
Gertrude Bell's talents were endless. She was an excellent writer, traveller and mountain climber. Born in Durham, England, she travelled to the Middle East lots of times. Gertrude taught herself archaeology so that she could study history. She also climbed lots of peaks in the beautiful Alps. She loved dangerous journeys and adventures.

Amelia Earhart (1897-1937)
Amelia's childhood was full of adventure because she loved building, camping and exploring. As a child, she lived with her mother, father and sister in Kansas, America. When she grew up, she became the first female pilot to fly over the Atlantic. Her determination led her to prove to the world that a woman could be a pilot, so she set off on the exciting journey. Amelia's flight took off across the Atlantic Ocean from Canada to North America to Wales in the UK. Unfortunately, she disappeared on a flight around the world in 1937 and has never been found. She is remembered as one of the bravest women in flying history.
